Method

1. Soften the shells

Boil the jumbo pasta shells for 2 minutes, or follow the packet if it asks for a different start. Drain and cool until you can handle them. Do not cook dry pasta with smoke alone.

2. Fill the shells

Mix the raw pork sausage meat with the diced onion. Brush the sausage filling with 0.5 tbsp olive oil. Season with the 0.5 tsp smoked paprika, 0.25 tsp black pepper and 0.25 tsp salt allocated to the main. Reserve the regional seasoning ingredients for the separate sauce, including any additional smoked paprika. Spoon it into the jumbo pasta shells and press the filling in so there are no large gaps. Stand the shells upright in a single layer on a heatproof tray. A strip of streaky bacon around each shell is optional and is pork; leave it off if you are not eating pork.

3. Hot-smoke the shells

Stabilise the outdoor smoker at 140-149°C, inside the 107-149°C smoking range. Cook the jumbo pasta shells for 45-70 minutes. The centre of the sausage filling must reach at least 75°C. Check several shells with a clean food thermometer. Start the slaw during the final 15 minutes.

4. Prepare the slaw

Begin this side during the final 15 minutes, once the main is nearly cooked or tender. Shred the cabbage and grate the carrot. Toss with 0.5 tbsp apple cider vinegar allocated to this side and 0.5 tbsp of the olive oil allocated to the side. Keep chilled until serving.

5. Cook the regional sauce separately

Heat 0.5 tbsp olive oil allocated to the sauce in a small saucepan. Soften the minced garlic for 30 seconds over low heat, then add 7.5 g fresh ginger, 0.375 tsp garlic powder, 0.125 tsp ground black pepper, 0.125 tsp chilli flakes and all 60 ml vegetable stock. Simmer gently for 3-4 minutes, stirring to cook the spices without scorching. Keep sweet pastes and sugary seasoning off direct heat. Keep the sauce hot while finishing the main.

6. Add the fresh sauce finish

Chop any herbs or spring onions; zest and juice any citrus. Stir 0.5 tbsp vegan soy sauce, 40 g pear, 0.5 tsp toasted sesame oil, 0.5 tsp sesame seeds, 1 spring onions into the cooked sauce off the heat, using citrus juice to taste. If tahini is included, loosen it first with a little water. The complete sauce is now ready for the filling, dip or serving plate; keep sweet sauce off direct heat.

7. Warm the buns

Split and toast the buns cut-side down on a clean grill area or in a dry pan for 1-2 minutes; watch closely. Serve the slaw alongside or tuck it into the buns.

8. Sauce after cooking

Spoon the regional sauce over the shells only after they leave the heat. Do not put a sweet glaze on them for the whole smoke.

9. Prepare the regional staple

Prepare these accompaniments alongside the sausage shotgun shells; check each packet's cooking or soaking time first so they finish near service. Rinse 100 g Korean short-grain rice, then cook in a saucepan using the packet's water ratio, cooking and resting time. Keep them ready for the final assembly. Template staple, not a kitchen-tested traditional dish. Check the packet.

10. Keep the cooked components ready

Keep the fully cooked main and its accompaniments ready. Complete the final hot toss assembly below before serving.

11. Toss it hot

Cook the main to the endpoint already in this recipe, then toss it hot with the added ingredients for about a minute. Fold in Red capsicum, Wombok, Firm tofu. Check the packet on every bottled sauce against your dietary needs. Finish assembling the fully cooked ingredients as directed before serving. This variation is template-generated and not kitchen-tested.

Method notes

Use fuel-burning grills and smokers outdoors only, following the appliance manual. Never burn wood, charcoal or a smoking tray in an ordinary indoor oven or enclosed room.

For low hot-smoking, stabilise the cooking chamber at 120-140°C and monitor at grate level with a separate probe. Keep smoking temperatures within the USDA 107-149°C (225-300°F) range; a food probe measures the centre separately.

Bullet smoker: use its heat shield/water pan as the manufacturer directs. Offset smoker: cook in the indirect chamber away from the firebox and watch the hotter end. Kamado: fit the approved heat deflectors for indirect cooking. Vent settings and fuel amounts are appliance-specific; follow the manual.

Ordinary oven alternative: Bake the filled jumbo pasta shells at 180°C conventional / 160°C fan for 25-40 minutes, until the sausage centre reaches 75°C. The listed smoked paprika gives smoky seasoning; an ordinary oven does not hot-smoke food.

Regional pastes and finishing ingredients are used in a separate cooked sauce and dressing. Do not expose a sweet sauce to prolonged direct flames.

Hot-and-fast is a hotter pace, not another dish. Butcher paper, a foil wrap, a water spritz, and a snake or minion fire are equipment choices. Follow the appliance manual. None of them replaces the thermometer. This template does not cold-smoke or cure raw food at home.

This template leaves cheese out of the filling so the same shells can stay dairy-free. Optional bacon is pork and is not part of the measured shopping list.

Timings are estimates for the specified thickness. Read all steps first and prepare the sides near the end of long cooks. Scale quantities by servings, but check each piece independently; batch size does not scale the cooking time linearly.

Food safety

Sausages and other minced meat must reach at least 75°C in the centre; check several links with a clean food thermometer. Keep raw food separate from ready-to-eat ingredients. Keep cold foods at 5°C or colder and hot food above 60°C until serving; refrigerate leftovers promptly in shallow containers.
