Miso-ginger sausage shotgun shells

Template-generated - not kitchen-tested. Check the packet.

4 servings · about 105 minutes · balanced · medium

Jumbo pasta shells are filled with sausage meat and hot-smoked until the centre is cooked. Served with cabbage-carrot slaw and your selected regional sauce.

Equipment

Saucepan · Snug heatproof baking dish · Cooking foil or ovenproof lid · Tablespoon · Mixing bowl · Grater · Small saucepan · Clean chopping board and knife · Food thermometer · Grate-level thermometer · Outdoor smoker or indirect barbecue (oven alternative provided) · Small mixing bowl · Dry frying pan · Small bowl

Recorded allergens: sesame, soy, wheat. Check product labels and prevent cross-contact.

Ingredients

20 Jumbo pasta shells
  Note: Open jumbo conchiglioni shells, not long cannelloni tubes. Follow the packet cooking time and check for wheat.

500 g Raw pork sausage meat
  Note: Sausage meat, or sausages with the casings removed. For gluten-free or dairy-free, the packet must say so.

120 g Brown onion
  Note: Finely dice.

250 g Cabbage
  Note: Finely shred.

200 g Carrot
  Note: Coarsely grate.

1 tbsp Apple cider vinegar

3 tbsp Olive oil

3 cloves Garlic
  Note: Finely mince.

1 tsp Smoked paprika

0.5 tsp Ground black pepper

0.5 tsp Salt
  Note: Use less if the selected packaged product is salty.

120 ml Vegetable stock
  Note: Prepared liquid vegan stock; check allergens and gluten-free labelling where needed.

2 tbsp White miso
  Note: Choose a plant-based miso; for gluten-free, use a specifically labelled product.

20 g Fresh ginger
  Note: Finely grate.

0.25 tsp Chilli flakes
  Note: Add gradually to your taste.

1 tbsp Rice vinegar

1 tsp Toasted sesame oil

1 tbsp Sesame seeds

3 Spring onions
Note: Thinly slice.

Method

1. Soften the shells
Boil the open jumbo pasta shells to al dente using their packet timing. Drain and cool just until you can handle them. Keep the cooked shells separate and fill promptly. Do not substitute dry cannelloni tubes or cook dry pasta with smoke alone.

2. Fill the shells
Mix the raw pork sausage meat with the diced onion. Brush the sausage filling with 1 tbsp olive oil. Season with the 1 tsp smoked paprika, 0.5 tsp black pepper and 0.5 tsp salt allocated to the main. Reserve the regional seasoning ingredients for the separate sauce, including any additional smoked paprika. Divide the measured filling between the 20 cooked open jumbo pasta shells, about 30 g per shell, without packing a thick mound. Lay them opening-up in one layer in a snug heatproof baking dish. Add 100 ml hot water around the shells, not into the filling, and cover the dish tightly. Use additional dishes for larger batches.

3. Hot-smoke the shells
Stabilise the outdoor smoker at 140-149°C, inside the 107-149°C smoking range. Cook the covered dish for about 35-55 minutes, checking that a little steaming liquid remains and adding hot water if the dish dries. The centre of the sausage filling must reach at least 75°C; check several shells with a clean food thermometer and continue covered if needed. Uncover for only a final 5-10 minutes once the filling is cooked, for a light smoke without drying the pasta. Start the slaw during the final 8 minutes.

4. Prepare the slaw
Begin this side during the final 8 minutes, once the main is nearly cooked or tender. Shred the cabbage and grate the carrot. Toss with 1 tbsp apple cider vinegar allocated to this side and 1 tbsp of the olive oil allocated to the side. Keep chilled until serving.

5. Cook the regional sauce separately
Put 1 tbsp sesame seeds in a dry pan over medium-low heat. Stir for 1-2 minutes, until lightly golden and nutty; do not let them darken. Tip into a clean bowl to cool and reserve this same measured portion for the final garnish. Heat 1 tbsp olive oil in the pan over medium-low heat; do not let it smoke. Add 3 cloves garlic, 20 g fresh ginger, finely minced, grated or sliced as appropriate. Stir for 1-2 minutes until fragrant, without burning. Lower the heat. Stir in 0.25 tsp chilli flakes for 15-20 seconds just until fragrant, then add the liquid promptly so the ground spices do not scorch. Pour in 120 ml vegetable stock and stir, scraping the base of the pan. Bring to a gentle simmer. Keep the sauce separate from the main and off direct grill heat. Finish the main to its stated doneness before adding the sauce.

6. Add the fresh sauce finish

Once the sauce base is ready, take the pan off the heat. Loosen 2 tbsp white miso with a spoonful of the warm cooked sauce, then stir it all back in. Keep this sauce gentle rather than bringing it back to a hard boil, to retain the delicate aroma. Off the heat, add 1 tbsp rice vinegar gradually. Fold through the cooked sauce and taste before adding extra seasoning. Off the heat, scatter over the already toasted, reserved sesame seeds. Use the same measured portion prepared earlier; do not toast a second batch. Off the heat, fold in 1 tsp toasted sesame oil, 3 spring onions. Wash and finely chop the fresh produce first. Add the toasted sesame oil only as a finishing seasoning, not as frying oil. The finished sauce is ready for the filling, dip or serving plate. Keep it off direct flame to preserve the fresh finish.

7. Sauce after cooking

Spoon the regional sauce over the shells only after they leave the heat. Do not put a sweet glaze on them for the whole smoke.

8. Serve the complete meal

Bring the sausage shotgun shells and cabbage-carrot slaw to the table together. Offer any remaining prepared regional sauce alongside. Serve promptly while the hot components are hot.

Method notes

Use fuel-burning grills and smokers outdoors only, following the appliance manual. Never burn wood, charcoal or a smoking tray in an ordinary indoor oven or enclosed room.

For low hot-smoking, stabilise the cooking chamber at 120-140°C and monitor at grate level with a separate probe. Keep smoking temperatures within the USDA 107-149°C (225-300°F) range; a food probe measures the centre separately.

Bullet smoker: use its heat shield/water pan as the manufacturer directs. Offset smoker: cook in the indirect chamber away from the firebox and watch the hotter end. Kamado: fit the approved heat deflectors for indirect cooking. Vent settings and fuel amounts are appliance-specific; follow the manual.

Ordinary oven alternative: Use the packet-cooked, filled open shells and scaled water in a tightly covered dish. Bake at 180°C conventional / 160°C fan for about 25-40 minutes, checking several sausage centres reach 75°C; extend covered if needed. Uncover briefly only after the filling is cooked. Add the regional sauce after cooking. The listed smoked paprika gives smoky seasoning; an ordinary oven does not hot-smoke food.

Regional pastes and finishing ingredients are used in a separate cooked sauce and dressing. Do not expose a sweet sauce to prolonged direct flames.

Hot-and-fast is a hotter pace, not another dish. Butcher paper, a foil wrap, a water spritz, and a snake or minion fire are equipment choices. Follow the appliance manual. None of them replaces the thermometer. This template does not cold-smoke or cure raw food at home.

This is a moist, open-jumbo-shell adaptation of shotgun shells; it does not use long cannelloni tubes or bacon wrapping. Cheese is left out so the same measured filling can stay dairy-free.

Timings are estimates for the specified thickness. Read all steps first and prepare the sides near the end of long cooks. Scale quantities by servings, but check each piece independently; batch size does not scale the cooking time linearly.

Food safety

Sausages and other minced meat must reach at least 75°C in the centre; check several links with a clean food thermometer. Keep raw food separate from ready-to-eat ingredients. Keep cold foods at 5°C or colder and hot food above 60°C until serving; refrigerate leftovers promptly in shallow containers.

Shared from Fusion Table. This file is the template, not a kitchen test.